The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 8-10, 14, 17 and 20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Improved Adhesion between Kapton Film and Copper Metal by Plasma Graft Polymerization of Vinylimidazole by Inagaki et al. Macromolecules, 1996, 29 1642-1648); hereinafter Inagaki et al (of record).

Inagaki et al teach a surface film Kapton that is modified by plasma graft polymerization of vinylimidazole to improve adhesion with copper. The plasma graft polymerization deposited the heterogeneous layer of polyvinylimidazole in the form of an island-sea type structure. The graft polymer layer interacted with the copper to form a charge transfer complex i.e. to improve copper adhesion. (Cf. Abstract) It would have been obvious to use the organic compound recited in applicants' claims 8 and 14 (characterized as "IV" inasmuch as the differences between this compound and the one used by Inagaki et al are so insignificant that a PHOSITA would have been able, without undue skill, to develop or to make and use the formula "IV" structure given the Inagaki et al teaching. Moreover inasmuch as Inagaki et al expressly teach that improved adhesion of copper on a Kapton film would result with a plasma graft polymerization of vinylimidazole it would have been obvious to electrolessly plate copper onto the graft polymer.
